

Module Three Video – Intro to Creating Communities

In TESOL or sociolinguistic theory, we talk a lot about communities of practice, however we often don't think about our Centre as a community of practice – and when we do, we start to see student experience in a different light.

An ELT Centre is not only a learning community, but a support network for our students as they navigate into their English-speaking life. As students feel they are welcome and fit into the community at your Centre, this will help them integrate into the wider community. So what helps create a community?
